

Dear Mr. Hunt,

As your district representative in the Department of Transportation for the state of Ohio, I am writing to ask for your help. A highway proposal has been brought to our attention that would solve the many problems our currently overcrowded highways have created. We request your cooperation in this effort because the only route this new highway could possibly take would require your farmland.

Your friends in the government are willing to help you create your dream farm in one of four locations. We realize these new locations may be better accommodating to crops and animals other than those currently on your farm, and the Department of Agriculture is prepared to help you in this transition. These places are not flawless, we understand, but careful research should guide you in choosing a suitable location. The four choices include:

- The base of Kilauea, located in the state of Hawaii.
- A piece of land on the San Andreas Fault Line, in the state of California.
- A riverfront farm in southern Minnesota, along the Mississippi River.
- A heavily wooded area in California's Sierra Nevada.

We advise you to seek expert help in choosing your new farm location, and we will need to be made aware of this decision after this year's harvest is complete. We apologize for this inconvenience, but careful consideration of this highway matter has left us feeling as if we have no choice. We ask for your full support and cooperation.

Sincerely,

Mike Taft
